This Week's Amusements.

Mr. Charles A. Gardner, a German dialect comedian of unusual ability, will be at the Park this afternoon, to-night, and all this week in his new "Karl," a play that affords him opportunities to be vastly amusing. He is a good singer and clever dancer, and has an excellent supporting company.

The regular season at English's will be opened next Thursday night by Mr. J. M. Hill's new star, James C. Roach, in his Irish-American play, "Dan Darcy." The attraction is one which has been very warmly commended in the East, and is much more excellent impression everywhere. The sale will begin to-morrow.

THE EVILS OF ONE'S NATURE

Temptation Adapts Itself Readily to Many Classes and Conditions of Men.

What Some Persons Will Submit to Others Will Shun—An Eloquent Talk on Temptation—Dedication of a Baptist Church.

The Rev. Dr. McLeod, of the Second Presbyterian Church, preached an interesting sermon last night, at Plymouth Church, on the subject of temptations. He classed temptations as of two kinds—those from without and those from within. There were many forms in which they appealed to a man; they might appeal to the eye; sometimes to the ear, or to the intellect, and at other times to the baser part of one's nature. They adapted themselves to all conditions. A temptation which would attract one man might be repulsive to another; some people were too coarse to perceive the finer forms of evil, others were so refined as to be repulsed by the grosser sins. Like the serpent in the garden, the tempter would adapt itself to every disposition which it sought to impress. There was a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in almost every one of us; that story was nothing more than the seventh chapter of Roman told in a captivating way by a brilliant writer. If Satan were our only tempter, said the preacher, "we could easily overcome our temptations, for we are not ignorant of his devices. But the great trouble is, we tempt ourselves. Instead of being tempted by the devil we tempt him. We walk right into the midst of temptation, even though we see before us the large flaming letters, 'DANGER.' We see the asp among the flowers; we know that we are bound to have the flowers, and taking them in our hand receive the deadly sting. Unless there is a power to extract that poison we are ruined forever."

It was quite different, he continued, with those who watched and prayed against temptation. If they were led into it they took fast hold of the hand of God, and while Satan stood on one side pushing them in, the Master led them past. "We too often forget," said he, "that Christ has redeemed the body as well as the soul. I believe that my body as well as my soul is redeemed, and that, in some form or other, it is to be the caress which he holds in the countless years to come the precious jewel of my soul. How important, therefore, that we keep our bodies pure and clean, fit habitations for the spirit of God."

The Doctor severely denounced the offering of meaningless prayers. "The most surprised people in the world," said he, "would be some people if their prayers were answered. You pray, Lord, lead me not into temptation; and then you go off and walk right into temptation. I do not propose to denounce all theaters, but Christians know that there are many shows to which they should not lend the influence of their presence. What good, therefore, would there be in a Christian getting on his knees and praying the Lord not to lead him into temptation when he had in his pocket a ticket to one of these shows?" In order to overcome temptation, he continued, one must rely on strength from the Lord. He should become so strong in the Lord that he could face temptation and crush it. Robert Browning expressed the idea beautifully when he said that a man, if he had met temptation and had stamped it under foot would be "redeemed in triumph." Temptations had a value in the economy of grace else they would not be here. "I believe," said the speaker, "that one may be tempted and yet commit no sin. There was a time when I was led to believe differently, but I am convinced of the difference now. Most of you have read 'Measure for Measure.' Next to the Bible Shakespeare is about as good a book as you can read. In 'Measure for Measure' you know he says: 'It is one thing to be tempted, fleshly; and another thing to fall.' Thank God for that. We are bound to be tempted, but through faith in Christ we will be able to overcome temptations."

In conclusion he said that sometimes there was only one way of escaping from temptation, and that was by running away from it. Such an act was not cowardly. If you could not run away you should stand firm and resist, and then the devil would fly away.

A Memorial Service.

The death of Mrs. J. H. Ford and Mrs. W. B. Barry caused the services at Central-avenue Church, yesterday, to deviate from the usual course. In the morning the regular order was abandoned, only the preliminary services being conducted by Secretary Douglas, of the Y. M. C. A., who, after a brief announcement and a few appropriate words, dismissed the people. A memorial service was arranged for the evening, which was under the direction of Mr. J. B. Conner. There was a large attendance of the membership and friends of the church. Rev. Father Lynch was in the pulpit and offered prayer, with the reading of appropriate selections of Scripture. Addresses were made by Capt. E. F. Ritter and Dr. E. S. Elder, after which the following tribute was read and ordered spread upon the church records:

"The church is sorely stricken. Death in any form and under any circumstances cannot be dreaded of its sense of loss; but to our church the double blow it has suffered is more than ordinarily painful and bereaving. Mrs. Barry has been prevented from active participation in privilege and duty for many months, but hearts have been knit together in tender regard throughout the long period of separation. She has not been absent in spirit, nor has she been forgotten by us. We rejoice greatly in the memory of her quiet but helpful presence in other days, and will tenderly treasure the sacred lessons of her triumphant death. To our brother and the dear children we tender loving sympathy, commending them to Him who is the God of the living as well as of the dead."

"The removal of Mrs. Ford affects the church closely and vitally. The wife of a Methodist pastor occupies a unique position, and is cherished in the hearts of the people alongside of their chosen leader. Her influence touches every phase of social and domestic life, and, in latter years especially, has become of paramount importance in many departments of the aggressive Christian work of the church. Called of God, alike with her husband, to this field of labor, Mrs. Ford brought to it a character of rare sweetness and strength, special and commanding grace of person and mind, and, to crown all, a loving and a willing heart. Brief as was her identification with the church, it was yet ample to demonstrate her peculiar fitness for the responsibility to which God had summoned her, her ability to be a helpmeet for him to whom she gave the devotion of her heart and the service of her life, and to win for her the love and love of the entire membership and live in death, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial; and, through seemingly death came to her untimely, yet noble, and with her life rounded off of earnest service and still more earnest faith and purpose to receive the welcome—'Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.' To our beloved pastor and brother and his family we extend the deepest sympathy of Christian fellowship. We would fain help them bear the stroke; and together as we have been smitten, be together strengthened and strengthened for future labor in the Master's kingdom for the glory of God."

The music was specially prepared for the occasion, in addition to the hymns, Jeannette Halford singing "One sweetly solemn thought."

The service throughout was of the most solemn and fitting character, closing with the benediction by Dr. Lynch.

The funeral services for Mrs. Ford will be held at the family residence, No. 37 Central-avenue, this morning at 9:30, the interment being made at Marion, this afternoon. The services for Mrs. Barry will be at the family home, No. 74 College-avenue, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, the interment to be at Dayton, O., to-morrow.

An Eloquent Lecture.

S. A. Haines, of New York, is one of the few traveling men who started on the road as far back as 1856. During these long years he has seen many wonderful changes in the cities, modes of travel, style of transacting business, and has seen the number engaged in his calling in this country increase from a few hundred to over a quarter of a million. He travels all over the United States and Canada, makes frequent trips to Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Russia, Holland and other countries. Notwithstanding the long trips and hard work performed by Mr. Haines, he has been appointed agent for advertising in the country wrecked by intemperance and now he comes to this city to promote temperance habits among the commercial men wherever he goes.

He is president of the Commercial Temperance League with headquarters in New York. A large audience welcomed him at the Tabernacle Church last night, to hear his address on "Lend a Hand." He is a man of unusual eloquence and ability, and for more than an hour held the close attention of his audience. His subject related almost entirely to the temperance question, and while many expected to hear the old-time statistical style of lecture, they were gratified to know that he had taken a new and entirely different method. His illustrations were new and very effective, the audience frequently being moved to tears and again to laughter. Mr. Haines' manner of telling how the piece "In the sweet by and by" was written was very touching and left an impression on the audience that will be long remembered. At the close of his address many gathered around him and extended an invitation to come again. Already arrangements are being made to have him speak in one of the other churches upon his return to the city on his next trip.

A Church Dedicated.

A new colored Baptist church was dedicated yesterday. It is a frame on the northwest corner of Morris and Maple streets, and is nicely furnished. The seats are of cedar, the pulpit is handsomely finished, and the entire structure is a creditable one in every way. The church was pretty well packed, many being unable to obtain seats. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Carr, of the Second Baptist Church, assisted by Rev. J. H. Morton, of the Little Zion Baptist Church. The pastor, Rev. Charles Williams, also made a brief address. The building was erected under the direction of Henry Baptist, a colored man, and all the work upon it was done by colored men.

Industrial and Trade Notes.

The three natural-gas companies are now furnishing fuel gas to ninety-two Indianapolis manufacturers.

Furniture and lounge manufacturers report trade a little off with them, but look for a decided improvement next month.

The Atlas Engine Company is so full of business that last week it commenced to work every night, except Saturday, until 9 P. M.

Sinker, Davis & Co. are this week to put in position two 75-horse-power boilers and a 100-horse-power engine for the C. H. Gillette works.

The Indianapolis Terra Cotta Company is getting out some fine work to be used on the Masonic building in process of erection at Washington.

The Indianapolis Cabinet Company made a large shipment of fine desks to London, England, last week, and a car-load went to San Francisco.

The large machine shops and foundries in the city are running on full time, and in most cases the orders are larger and more numerous than at this time last year.

The Indianapolis Veneering Company has part of its buildings up and is putting new machinery in position. Work is being rapidly pushed on the other portion of the buildings.

Some idea of the business that W. H. Coleman is doing at his stove and heating manufacturers may be formed from the fact that he daily uses up thirteen car-loads of rough timber.

The Sanborn Organ Company has its new building on Twelfth street, just east of the Lake Erie & Western railroad tracks, completed, and has already several orders for organs, two being large instruments for churches.

Mason J. Osgood has just completed a large two-story building near the corner of Christian avenue and the Lake Erie & Western railroad tracks, in which he is placing a machinery, preparatory to manufacturing fine furniture.

Rockwood, Newcomb & Co. are testing in one of their boilers the heater of the Indiana Feed Water Heater and Purifying Company. The members of the Indianapolis Stationary Engineers' Association are a good deal interested in the test.

Indianapolis elevators contained, on Saturday, 450,390 bushels of grain, against 331,780 bushels for the corresponding date 1887. The increase of 118,610 bushels was largely in wheat, there being 375,375 bushels against 254,790 at the same date last year.

A new industry is opening up to women. In one of the wholesale tinware manufacturing a dozen or more girls are employed preparing the tin to be put together into buckets, boilers and other articles. They do more work than men in the same position.

Pump manufacturers are complaining of dull times, as a large per cent of their business comes from the farmers, and owing to the light crops last season they have been short of money and in many cases are making the old wooden pump hold over until next year.

The Indianapolis Stove Company is well equipped in its new foundry, and foundrymen who have seen it pronounce it one of the most convenient places of the kind they have ever seen. The company is receiving large orders from Kansas, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

McKee & Branham to-day take possession of their new block, corner of Georgia and Meridian streets, which is unquestionably one of the best blocks in the city in style of architecture and convenience. The building is five stories high, and each floor contains 3,500 square feet.

The Indianapolis Frog and Switch Company, which filed articles of association with the Secretary of State on Saturday, has leased the building near the rail-rolling-mill, formerly occupied by the Emley Railroad Supply Company, and expects soon to have seventy-five men at work.

The manufacture of brooms is becoming an important industry of Indianapolis. Besides the factory at the Blind Asylum, there are two others. J. A. Humphrey, the proprietor of one of them, has recently increased his force, and finds ready sale for his entire product, largely in this State.

The three canning companies and the manufacturers of clothing in this city are now giving employment to 2,000 women. In working for the canning companies the women make money enough to rest between seasons, as good wages are paid them. Some receive as high as $10 or $12 a week. Small girls make from $3 to $5 per week.

The Steel Rail Rolling-mill Company last week held a special meeting to discuss the question of resuming operations, either as a steel rail-mill or as one for the manufacture of steel wire for nails. After a lengthy discussion the whole question was postponed until the regular monthly meeting the first Wednesday in October. It is thought that then some action of a definite character will be taken.

Personal Mention.

Willie C. Vajen and family have returned from Maximilian, Mexico.

Mr. A. E. Howe, who has been on a short visit to Cincinnati and North Bend, has returned home.

Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Brennan have returned from Rochester, N. Y., to their residence on North Tennessee street.

The Crop Bulletin.

The weather crop bulletin from the Indiana service for the week ending the 8th inst. states that although cool and dry the general condition of the weather has been quite favorable. No rain fell, except in the southeast and southern portions of the State where, although fairly distributed, the amount ranged from 0.20 to 1.30 inch. The temperature was cool throughout and quite below the normal, but with much sunshine it was rather beneficial to the ripening corn. Very light frost was reported to have occurred at a few places on Sept. 3.

Ryan, The Hatter.

21 and 23 South Illinois street.

Mr. J. E. DENNISON, representing F. L. Dunne, the well-known tailor, of Boston, will be at the New Denison to-day and to-morrow (Monday and Tuesday) with samples of the latest London novelties and several handsomely-made sample garments, representing the different styles for the coming season.

Gentlemen who appreciate fine work and exclusive styles are invited to call and examine the above. It will be worth your while.

Builders and Contractors.

It is worth your while, if you are building, to investigate the Hill's sliding inside blind, which are taking the place of the old style very rapidly. Cheaper, handsomer, no sagging, no rattling, very light and durable; don't interfere with curtains, and can be taken out in one minute. Call on the Hill's at 32 South Meridian street, or send for circular.

HILDBRAND & FUGATE.

Wrought Steel Ranges.

ODD DESIGNS

A neat design in sleeve links is of silver in motif oxidized finish. On one end are two curb-chain pattern links, and a hollow twist bar does duty on the other. But this is only one of many. There is no end to the shapes and patterns in which sleeve buttons are worked in all materials. The same might be said of all similar small articles of adornment—pins, clasps, rings and so forth and so on. It is an interesting and instructive pastime to inspect them. Come do so.

Saying and Seeing.

We have time to show goods and tell about them. But it is much easier to do the former than the latter, for the folks who do the inspecting of them help in part. In deed, it is difficult to tell of our stock now that it is replenished all along the line for the fall and winter campaign, for it is so large, so varied that hardly any amount of space could describe it. Come and see for yourselves.
